

Job Applicant Privacy Notice

We, Cathedral Music Trust (CMT, the Trust), collect and process personal data relating to job applicants as part of our recruitment process. We are committed to being transparent about how we collect and use that data and to meeting our data protection obligations.

This notice sets out the basis on which we collect, use and disclose the personal data of our job applicants, as well as your rights in respect of such personal data.

What information does the Trust collect and how?

CMT collects a range of information about you. This includes:

- your name, address and contact details, including email address and telephone number
- details of your qualifications, skills, experience and employment history
- information from interviews and phone-screenings you may have
- information about your current level of remuneration, including benefit entitlements
- information about your entitlement to work in the UK

We may collect this information in a variety of ways. For example, data might be contained in application forms or CVs (including when these are sent to us as part of speculative applications or queries), obtained from your passport or other identity documents, or collected through interviews or other methods of assessment.

We may also collect personal data about you from third parties, such as references supplied by former employers. We will seek information from third parties only once a job offer has been made to you, unless you give us your consent to do so sooner.

Data will be stored in a range of different places, including on your application record, in our HR management systems and our email system.

Why does CMT process personal data?

CMT collects and processes your data for a number of purposes and where we have a legal basis to do so, as follows.

CMT has a legitimate interest in processing personal data during the recruitment process and for keeping records of the process. Processing data from job applicants allows us to manage the recruitment process, assess and confirm a candidate's suitability for employment and decide to whom to offer a job. We may also need to process data from job applicants to respond to and defend against legal claims.

In some cases, we need to process data to ensure that we are complying with our legal obligations. For example, we are required to check a successful applicant's eligibility to work in the UK before employment starts.

CMT may process information about whether or not applicants are disabled so we can make reasonable adjustments for candidates who have a disability.

Who has access to data?

Your information may be shared for the purposes of the recruitment process. This includes members of the administration team, interviewers involved in the recruitment process (which may include representatives from partner organisations), and Trustees.

If your application for employment is successful and an offer of employment is made, or if you have given us your consent to approach former employers at the shortlist stage, we will share your data with former employers in order to obtain references.

In addition, we may need to share your personal information with a regulator or otherwise to comply with the law.

How does CMT protect data?

CMT takes the security of your data seriously. We have internal policies and controls in place to ensure that your data is not lost, accidentally destroyed, misused or disclosed, and is not accessed except by our personnel in the proper performance of their duties.

For how long does CMT keep data?

If your application for employment is unsuccessful (including when you have speculatively applied to us in respect of a role which is not available), we will hold your data on file for 6 months. At the end of that period, your data is deleted or destroyed (unless we need to retain it for longer to exercise or defend any legal claims).

If your application for employment is successful, personal data gathered during the recruitment process will be transferred to your personnel file and retained during your employment. The periods for which employee data is held will be provided to you in a separate employees' privacy notice.

Your rights

As a data subject, you have a number of rights under data protection law. You can:

- access and obtain a copy of your data on request
- require CMT to change incorrect or incomplete data
- require CMT to delete or stop processing your data, for example where the data is no longer necessary for the purposes of processing
- object to the processing of your data where CMT is relying on its legitimate interests as the legal ground for processing
- ask us to transfer your data to another organisation

If you would like to exercise any of these rights or if you have any questions about this notice or our processing of your data more generally, please contact admin@fcm.org.uk

If you believe that CMT has not complied with your data protection rights, you can complain to the Information Commissioner's Office (<https://ico.org.uk/>).

What if you do not provide personal data?

You are under no statutory or contractual obligation to provide data to CMT during the recruitment process. However, if you do not provide the information, we may not be able to process your application.
